S₂ Ethics Strategies

Effective Date: March 1, 2021

Last Revised: March 1, 2021

Thank you for visiting this website ("Site") and for reviewing our privacy policy. Your privacy is very important to S₂ Ethics Strategies and our Site has been developed with that in mind. We recognize your right to know what information is being collected about you and how that information will be used, as well as our legal obligations to limit collection and protect the information we obtain. This policy was updated as of March 1, 2021.

S₂ Ethics Strategies operates for purely professional purposes, and any personal information you share will not be shared with third parties for direct marketing purposes. By using this site or providing to us your personal information through email, you consent to the collection and use of personal information as stated in this Policy.

Information that You Provide Voluntarily

You do not have to give us personal information to visit the Site. You may use our contact form, which does involve providing (and therefore our collecting) personally identifiable information you specifically and knowingly provide. This includes, but is not limited to, first and last name, physical address, email address, telephone number, and possibly other identifiers that permit us to contact you.

The personally identifiable information you provide through the Site may be used to:

- Respond to your email inquiry;
- Provide the services or products you request;
- Forward your email inquiry to the appropriate person or entity for response or assistance; or
- Notify you of issues or information in subject areas or matters you have expressed interest in or concern about.

Data Retention

- The information you provide may also be collected for our firm's statistical purposes, including to perform analyses of user behavior to measure customer interest in the various areas of, or particular pages on, the Site. We do not include personally identifiable information in analyzing site visitor information in aggregate form.
- If we respond to your electronic inquiry, the personally identifiable information you provided for us to do so will be periodically deleted after our communication has concluded.
- This site uses cookies. A cookie is a small file created by your Web browser to assign a unique identification to your computer. The site uses the cookie to track your clicks as you browse and move between pages on the Site. We do not use cookies to retrieve personal information about you from your computer. You are not required to accept our cookies and you may restrict their use by changing your browser settings and you may delete our cookies from your hard drive. If you use the Site and do not disable these cookies, then you consent to our use of these cookies.
- If you do nothing during your visit but browse through the Site, read pages, or download information, we will gather and store certain information about your visit automatically. This information does not identify you personally. We do not track or record information about individuals and their visits. We use this information to learn about the number of visitors accessing different sections of or pages on the Site, what information is of greatest interest, and technical information that will enhance your ease of use, such as system performance, problem areas, and the types of technology our visitors use. We automatically collect and store only the following information about your visit:
 - The Internet domain (for example, "xagency.gov or .org" if you use an organizational access account, or "yourschool.edu" if you connect from a university's domain) and IP address (the number that is automatically assigned to your computer whenever you are surfing the Web) from which you access the Site;
 - The type of browser and operating system used to access the Site;
 - The date and time you access the Site;
